Here lately a dog seems to figure in every local love story: An out of town girl had two Topeka suitors. When she made a final choice between them as a balm for the disappointment of the one who lost out, she handed him a lemon colored bull pup. A bachelor girl who lives at a lodging house had a dog to which she was greatly devoted but couldn't keep him with her and tried a number of boarding places for him without satisfaction. Finally, in desperation, although she was otherwise well pleased with single blessedness, she decided to get married in order to make a home for her dog. She selected a man whom she thought would be a good "Providence" for Fido, but in order to do nothing rash, she persuaded him (the Good Provider) to take Fido home for a few weeks to see how they got along together. But whether the dog didn't like the new home, or whether he had "boarded around" so much that he had developed tramp habits, he ran away one day and never came back and the wedding has been indefinitely postponed. In the case of a marriage like this the probation system seems to work all right. There is another sad story going the rounds of a homesick dog whose homeless master lives at his club and who has had the usual troubles trying to find a place for the dog to stay. A lawyer friend suggested that he marry to make a home for the dog then get a divorce and have the court award the custody of the dog to the wife. He was unwilling to part with the dog irrevocably, however, but has been loaning it around to his girl friends, turn about, and as he is a feckle young man and plays many favorites the dog is never in one place more than two or three weeks at a time. Find out who has the dog and you can tell which girl is ace high with him. When he wants to take the dog away from one girl to loan it to another he tells the first girl that the dog is sick and that he wants to take him to the dog doctor for a few weeks. Whenever the girl inquires about the dog his master says he is growing worse and worse and if she pins him down and wants to know definitely when he will bring the dog back, he tells her that the dog has an incurable disease. Then the girl hears that one of her rivals has the dog and realizes finally that she is stung. She sends back—not the ring but the dog chain—and Love's Young Dream is O'er.

Mr. Albert T. Reid has two full page drawings illustrating a story in the current number of the American. The model for one of his girls was Miss Calin Cuttill and it is an excellent likeness of her. Mrs. Reid posed for the other.

Mrs. J. S. Burt has asked guests for bridge Tuesday evening.

They tell a story—probably an old one—repeated for the purpose—on a Topeka chap whose rotary tendencies are well known, to the effect that he went home recently at a very late hour. Just as he stepped inside the front hall his father called out to ask him what time it was. "Eleven o'clock," he replied promptly. Just then the cuckoo clock struck the hour of 2. At the end of the third "cuckoo" the son with rare presence of mind, took up the refrain and cuckooed eight times with such a good imitation of the clock that his dad who was half asleep anyway was perfectly satisfied. But imagine the condition of a man who could "make a noise like a clock" at 3 in the morning!

You can get out of making a girl to a party and still make your peace effectively and not lose your standing by sending her a big bunch of violets. Leavenworth Post: Mrs. Charles W. Goss and Miss Goss entertained a few friends very informally this afternoon, at "609" in compliment to Miss Neva Lehmann of Newton.

Mrs. John S. Dodsworth was hostess this afternoon, at an informal Kensington. Her guests were the women members of the Jiggerville camping party.

A mercenary man suspects every other man of his own motives. A local helmsman hunter who called on a Nothing-But-Money girl found another man there. Next morning he was telling a friend about it. "What's he doing out there?" he growled. "The only reason he goes there is because she lives in a Big House."

Lawrence World (Friday): The marriage of Dwight Hackett Elder to Miss Caroline Baskley, will take place this evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents at 1728 Massachusetts street.

Miss Baskley was formerly a professional nurse practicing in Topeka and a graduate of the Stormont training school.

A girl looking over a man's dance programme saw the initials H. T. H. appearing a number of times. She apparently scrawled over another name which had been written first. "What does H. T. H. stand for?" she asked. "H. T. H. replied, 'Indicates the variety of lemon which is handed to me three or four times at every dance.'"
